U.S. Admits It Didn't Exit Afghanistan Soon Enough

Policies Revised Over Chaotic Withdrawal
— Review Faults Actions by Trump

By KATIE ROGERS

WASHINGTON — The Biden administration's nearly two-year review of the calamitous American withdrawal from Afghanistan found that U.S. officials should have restarted the evacuation earlier, but placed extensive blame on President Biden's predecessor, former President Donald J. Trump.

The National Security Council on Thursday released a 12-page summary of the government's findings about the withdrawal in August 2021, which swiftly turned violent. As U.S. officials rushed to evacuate people from the international airport in Kabul, the capital, an Islamic State suicide bomber carried out an attack that killed 13 U.S. service members and as about the government's review. According to the document, the government has changed its policies to carry out such evacuations sooner when security conditions worsen.

But Mr. Kirby emphasized that actions taken by Mr. Trump — beginning with his deal with the Taliban to withdraw American troops by the spring of 2021, his hasty troop drawdowns and his later failure to share relevant transition materials with his successor's team — left Mr. Biden with few good options. According to the report, when Mr. Biden took office, there were only 2,500 troops in Afghanistan, down from about 10,000 when Mr. Trump took of
